UNITED SCUM SOUNDCLASH (U.S.S. v2)

Machine Gun (cd)

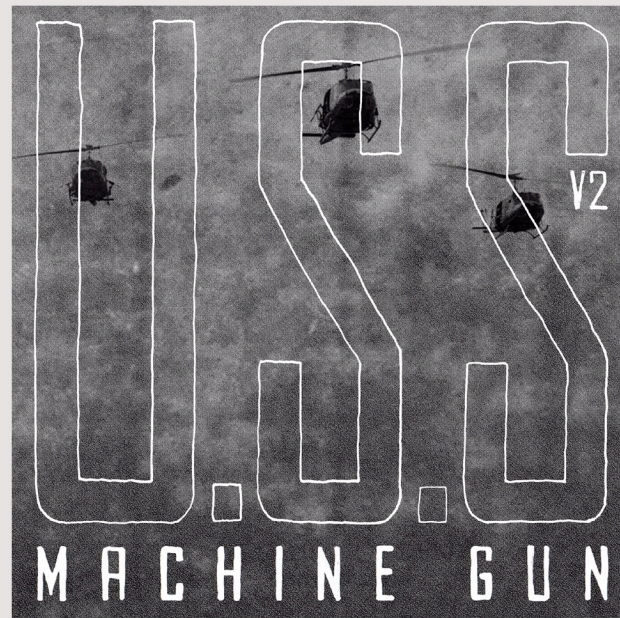

Soopa 2010

United Scum Soundclash was spawned in a depraved conjunction of Portuguese/American ingenuity by Jonathan Saldanha and Scott Nydegger in 2004. Their recorded works represent a previously unexplored musical realm, where genres clash and inventive production techniques have allowed rock, free jazz, electronics, eastern traditional, and experimental noise to play together on harmonious musical ground.

"Machine Gun" takes a cinematic approach to sound. The tracks delve into dark matters such as guns, war and the breakdown of society. The featured players come from an array of musical backgrounds with members of The Stooges, Barbez, Ovo, Soopa, Hallux, the Radon and Hop-Frog collectives, and Love 666, laying waste to conventional notions of sound.

With this second volume, U.S.S. paves new roads towards the creation of a musical form devoid of any pretext, reveling in style-bending encounters of creative oddity.

After the release of "Machine Gun" and its lead-off single, "Sevad Kooh", The Scum will continue to give concert performances and The Saldanha/Nydegger team return to "The Bunker" to prepare the next phase in this auditory metamorphosis.
